

Let's live like this..

A «dive» into joy!

Nicolás (Chile)

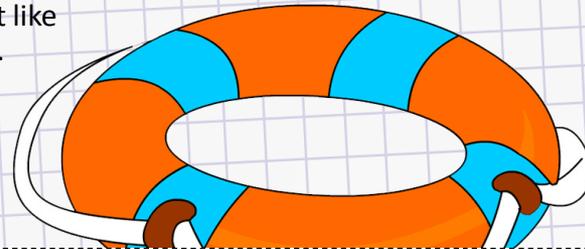

In the summer I often went to visit my grandmother, because in her apartment building there's a big swimming pool, and sometimes I invited my friends for a swim there.

Usually I would just pass by my grandmother's apartment to say hello and give her quick kiss, because I really don't like being with elderly people.

Then one day I heard inside me a voice saying that I shouldn't act like this and that I have to love her more. So I went to her apartment, and instead of going right to the pool, I stayed with her and asked her questions about her life. Amazingly, I wasn't bored!

I felt that when I gave her a kiss after that conversation, something was different between us, and inside my heart I experienced a great joy.

«I have become all things to all people»
(1 Cor 9:22)

The apostle Paul wrote this sentence to the community of Corinth, explaining why he tries to be "one" with all kinds of people, so as to bring them the joy and new life of the Gospel.

How could he do this?

Paul tried to love everyone, putting himself at the service of all, just like Jesus did.

Can you explain that better?

Chiara Lubich, summed up this phrase of Paul with the expression, "make yourself one" with others; "live what the other person is living."

*"To live the other person's life"?
How can you do that?"*

I'm sure you've already experienced it. When someone is crying, we cry with them and when they laugh, we laugh, too.

So, if I understand correctly, it means that when my brother gets a good grade at school, I am as happy as if I got that good grade myself. Or when a friend is sad, I stay with him, just like I want someone with me when I am living through a sad moment.

Yes, just like that!
